

'You Are What You Eat.'

A few days after the last summit, you found your senses almost supernaturally enhanced - sounds are louder, colours are brighter and more distracting. A short while after that, you found yourself getting steadily more sleepy - your sleep-patterns lengthening gradually, until you slept one night and didn't wake. At first, those around you worried that you might never open your eyes again, but wake you did - after three long days - exhausted, hungry and thirsty, your bladder bursting - you opened your eyes and stumbled from your bed to discover that you had undergone a profound transformation, physically shedding much of your skin to reveal the Naga Lineage underneath - the Lineage that, you must assume, you will carry for the rest of your days.

Mechanical Effect: If you were previously unlineaged, you have gained the Naga lineage and should read the section on "Naga" lineage for suggestions on trappings and roleplaying associated with this lineage.

Roleplaying Effect: Naga may degenerate into madness. Some naga become increasingly self-obsessed and selfish to the point where they are incapable of thinking of anyone but themselves. The pursuit of their goals - usually their own wealth and satisfaction - become so overriding that they find it impossible to consider other people. Concerned only with satisfying their own desires they see others as objects they own, things whose only purpose is to serve their whims. They take whatever they want, discard anything that does not serve their purpose and destroy any who get in their way.