

Lady Vivienne

I trust you enjoyed meeting with Ser Essen. He was quite flattering in his report. Myself I was torn as to whether to be offended or impressed by your actions with regards to my Ancestor's spirit. In truth I believe I am impressed. It is no simple magic and has rarely been a speciality in our nation.

And so I offer a little further aid.

House Lionsgate, already weak in fortune, have lost many in the recent years fighting against the Druj. I am certain that Morold is terrified that his fellows will have been turned into those despicable wraith creatures that the barbarians create. Should you want influence with him, you might orchestrate, through your influence among those who fight, any evidence you can that if any such Nobles were suffering once, their suffering has, at least, been ended now.

I hope either this route, or pursuing anything Courdelaine de Courdacier may have left in care of the Academy, or other routes of your own inventiveness will bear fruit soon.

May your weavings shine brightly

Godwin
