

To Prince Bishop Jonah Yakovich

Your Eminence,

Following the vast efforts and support from Imperial Citizens all across the Empire, I must write you this hasty note in order to inform you of the situation I have just uncovered. Forgive the state of this letter – I do not know what condition it will reach you in – but I am writing it in the woods outside of the city and have no means to protect it from the weather should it come to rain.

You will have already, by the time it reaches you, had word of the meeting which is taking place in Holmauer park. I have no doubt that it will concentrate some of the main perceived ringleaders of Agramant's network in Holberg.

However the documents we have obtained from the friends who have come to help us this season, thanks to your judgement in the assembly of Vigilance, have painted a more complex picture. There is a spiderweb of contacts and connected individuals in Holberg. A few powerful individuals with real ability to influence and shift things, providing boons to a much larger group of people with little power or visibility on the situation, simplistic plans and ambitions, and degenerate appetites.

Those who will be present at Holmauer park will be of the second category. They will have dark designs and sinister objectives, but they will not be the most dangerous ones present. That distinction belongs to the masterminds of the group. My investigations, and some reconnaissance work, suggests that they are meeting at a crossroads in Misericorde. Their meeting is planned to be very brief, and what the topic will be I do not know. It is planned specifically to occur while the other meeting in Holmauer park is drawing to its conclusion, to pass more unnoticed. Several letters seized at the house of one of their co-conspirators by a group of military units volunteered from Temeschwar has highlighted the purpose of this meeting: they know that a large search has been launched for them, and they are aware that most of their power base in Holberg will be discovered. They suspect that their meeting place may be stormed. However, they have chosen to run the risk in order to prepare the survival of their network, and discuss where they will hide, how to contact each other, and when to reactivate their network. Storming the meeting place will ensure that this group of Agramant cultists will be permanently destroyed at the root, I believe.

The time is 2:45 in the afternoon. The specific location in Misericorde is the Rimac Crossroads.
