

Monzcarro von Holberg

I have been asked by Exquy to thank you for your participation in the Trials of the Pallid Charm, and the gift of Dragonbone.

Your journey in the Trials ends now. Your gift and suffering were noted, but not all could continue towards their boon. But you still have The Tomb King's attention. There will be Heralds in the Hall of Worlds at 8 on the Friday evening of the Solstice.

My friend Nivalis will also be in Anvil, at the regio – so for those of you not able to enter the hall, they will fetch the Heralds to speak with you.

You are to be offered gifts – for some winter vis, for others the chance to wear a Ravening Focus or other small trinket of power. The Heralds will also unbond you from the pallid stone's you carry and remove that burden.

You should find your witnesses, and bring them with you to have their curses removed – although I have written to them also.

I hope you have learnt and grown in these trials, and that you will not be too disappointed at your journey ending.

For those who sought boons to aid the Empire – know that others who also sought great boons of this kind continue – what you hoped for may still happen.

For those who sought smaller, personal boons, know that there is always another way to reach such things.

As the winds blow through the silent chamber, I am

Anya of Highguard

Morven Whitemane

I have been asked by Exquy to thank you for your participation in the Trials of the Pallid Charm, and the gift of Dragonbone.

Your journey in the Trials ends now. Your gift and suffering were noted, but not all could continue towards their boon. But you still have The Tomb King's attention. There will be Heralds in the Hall of Worlds at 8 on the Friday evening of the Solstice.

My friend Nivalis will also be in Anvil, at the regio – so for those of you not able to enter the hall, they will fetch the Heralds to speak with you.

You are to be offered gifts – for some winter vis, for others the chance to wear a Ravening Focus or other small trinket of power. The Heralds will also unbond you from the pallid stone's you carry and remove that burden.

You should find your witnesses, and bring them with you to have their curses removed – although I have written to them also.

I hope you have learnt and grown in these trials, and that you will not be too disappointed at your journey ending.

For those who sought boons to aid the Empire – know that others who also sought great boons of this kind continue – what you hoped for may still happen.

For those who sought smaller, personal boons, know that there is always another way to reach such things.

As the winds blow through the silent chamber, I am

Anya of Highguard

Aurum Nightingale

I have been asked by Exquy to thank you for your participation in the Trials of the Pallid Charm, and the gift of Dragonbone.

Your journey in the Trials ends now. Your gift and suffering were noted, but not all could continue towards their boon. But you still have The Tomb King's attention. There will be Heralds in the Hall of Worlds at 8 on the Friday evening of the Solstice.

My friend Nivalis will also be in Anvil, at the regio – so for those of you not able to enter the hall, they will fetch the Heralds to speak with you.

You are to be offered gifts – for some winter vis, for others the chance to wear a Ravening Focus or other small trinket of power. The Heralds will also unbond you from the pallid stone's you carry and remove that burden.

You should find your witnesses, and bring them with you to have their curses removed – although I have written to them also.

I hope you have learnt and grown in these trials, and that you will not be too disappointed at your journey ending.

For those who sought boons to aid the Empire – know that others who also sought great boons of this kind continue – what you hoped for may still happen.

For those who sought smaller, personal boons, know that there is always another way to reach such things.

As the winds blow through the silent chamber, I am

Anya of Highguard

Kazimir Kirovitch Aristous

I have been asked by Exquy to thank you for your participation in the Trials of the Pallid Charm, and the gift of Dragonbone.

Your journey in the Trials ends now. Your gift and suffering were noted, but not all could continue towards their boon. But you still have The Tomb King's attention. There will be Heralds in the Hall of Worlds at 8 on the Friday evening of the Solstice.

My friend Nivalis will also be in Anvil, at the regio – so for those of you not able to enter the hall, they will fetch the Heralds to speak with you.

You are to be offered gifts – for some winter vis, for others the chance to wear a Ravening Focus or other small trinket of power. The Heralds will also unbond you from the pallid stone's you carry and remove that burden.

You should find your witnesses, and bring them with you to have their curses removed – although I have written to them also.

I hope you have learnt and grown in these trials, and that you will not be too disappointed at your journey ending.

For those who sought boons to aid the Empire – know that others who also sought great boons of this kind continue – what you hoped for may still happen.

For those who sought smaller, personal boons, know that there is always another way to reach such things.

As the winds blow through the silent chamber, I am

Anya of Highguard

Desmond Argonning

I have been asked by Exquy to thank you for your participation in the Trials of the Pallid Charm, and the gift of Dragonbone.

Your journey in the Trials ends now. Your gift and suffering were noted, but not all could continue towards their boon. But you still have The Tomb King's attention. There will be Heralds in the Hall of Worlds at 8 on the Friday evening of the Solstice.

My friend Nivalis will also be in Anvil, at the regio – so for those of you not able to enter the hall, they will fetch the Heralds to speak with you.

You are to be offered gifts – for some winter vis, for others the chance to wear a Ravening Focus or other small trinket of power. The Heralds will also unbond you from the pallid stone's you carry and remove that burden.

You should find your witnesses, and bring them with you to have their curses removed – although I have written to them also.

I hope you have learnt and grown in these trials, and that you will not be too disappointed at your journey ending.

For those who sought boons to aid the Empire – know that others who also sought great boons of this kind continue – what you hoped for may still happen.

For those who sought smaller, personal boons, know that there is always another way to reach such things.

As the winds blow through the silent chamber, I am

Anya of Highguard