

Cardinal Ynez di Caricomare,

My name is Aldo di Sarvos - named for the Paragon of our city - and I fight with a company of bravos called the Silver Shields. Usually, I would take up spiritual matters with the Chaplain of Courage attached to our company, but recently something happened that is a bit beyond her experience.

Several years back, an Urizeni named Tarquinius of Endsmeet Spire spent time with the Silver Shields. Tarquinius had travelled to Sarvos looking for his father, Fabius Endsmeet, who had gone missing. For an Urizen he seemed to have a smaller stick up his backside than most, and I quite liked him. Plus, not knowing my own father, I felt for him not knowing where his was.

Tarquinius returned to Urizen and I think he trained as some kind of Urizen priest of Loyalty. We have not been in touch for a long time.

You are probably wondering where this is going. The short version is that I found his father - or rather the ghost of his father. There's a place in the deep woodland of Foracci, near the border of Sarvos and Casinea, that no one goes - because there's this feeling that comes on you that means you don't want to go there.

I've written to Tarquinius with all the details, but I figured I also needed to tell someone in the Synod too. I know there's a High Exorcist, but the ghost is in Sarvos - and it doesn't seem right to write to an Urizeni when there's a Cardinal in Sarvos, if you follow me.

I think that I am asking if you could use your influence to help out my old Urizeni friend, Tarquinius. I figure he will be at Anvil and, if the stars are right, perhaps there will be a conjunction that opens the Sentinel Gate to Foracci.

For the League and Virtue,

Aldo di Sarvos
Silver Shields Bravo Company