

Domitila

I was wondering if you had made any progress towards finding the treasure of the League. I think we both appreciate the opportunity here to leave the other cities in no doubt that it is Mestra that is the true seat of power of our nation. I haven't heard from you, which is a shame.

I have received sketchy reports that the necklace we are seeking might have been among jewellery stolen by "bandits" from a caravan travelling from Highguard to somewhere in Urizen. I say "bandits" as it is just as likely they were in fact agents hired by some of our rivals in Regamo.

I believe that the Militia have become involved in the theft of the jewellery, but I doubt they know the true treasure that has been stolen. As you are attending the summit at Anril and I am not, you are in a much better position to pursue this lead than I am.

Oh - according to my source - the attack apparently took place near a way house called something like Bronwyn's Repose, or Bronwyn's Rest - although the name might be Alwyn's. It might be worse making some discreet enquiries among the Navam.

I have been making discreet enquiries with a couple of architects, and once the ring is recovered, -we will be ready to build a suitable place from which to display it.

This has become doubly important now that we have an Empress, and a citizen of the League at that. She is of Holberg, so I think you can see the significant value of a timely reminder of the importance of Mestra as the true seat of Tassato.

My thanks

For the pride of Mestra
