

The underbelly of Sarvos has been a hotbed of rumours and gossip in the past three months about what seems to be a new gang operating at night in the city. The effects are small scale on the city as a whole at the moment, but in the past three months they have grown their influence considerably, thanks in part some say to valuables stolen from League citizens last Winter. Limited to minor smuggling and some extortion, it is nothing the Sarvosian docks have not seen before but the speed with which they have established themselves is enough to cause concern about how powerful they may become if left alone. The history of Temeschwar may be an old lesson, but it is a good one. Of particular concern is the fact that there are rumours this gang have hired a coven of mountebanks to pay back a debt we are owed.