

To the esteemed Alderei the Rapacious,

I have found for you an opportunity to build upon your good, and wondrous, work in the frozen waste that is Sermersuaq, and deliver a blow to both the heroes of the Mark and also the red dogs of the Jotun.

There exists a meeting place, an ancestral and almost sacred place unclaimed by either nation. I believe that if you take the provided cup, with blood of both Jotun and Wintermark, and splash it upon the stones whilst calling upon the power of the Wendigo, then it will shatter the meeting place.

We have an ally in the Jotun, or rather one that serves beneath them. Uhtragh, a thrall, will meet you and provide you with the gift of a banner bearing the three rings of Wintermark for you to leave at the scene.

From what Uhtragh has said, there is a small camp of roughly twenty Jotun camped around the meeting place. It would, of course, be best for none to remain alive.

Yours in service,
The Walker of the Ways