

Brother Bonewall Yargol,

we hear your cry. we listen to your song. Your voice has reached us.

The humans try to silence you, prevent you from speaking your mind. You speak the truth in your heart - that humans and orcs are different, and what is right for them may not be right for us.

Yet for having an opinion - for speaking your mind - they threaten you with Inquisition, with Condemnation - they try to take away your voice!

Never be silenced, Yargol. Never let their voices out-shout yours. If the belief is strong within you, it will win out. A Synod that tries to quash the inspiration inside of you? That is no better than an Empire that tries to bind you in chains to do its work.

we are sure we are not the only voices shouting in your favour. The ancestors surely support you. Never falter if the voice still speaks inside
