

Archmage!

I sing to you of Adventure!

We have never met, but since you have risen to such power you must know on whose behalf I write.

A Herald of Rhianos charged me to deliver a key to Brianna's Chamber to Anvil. And to my shame – my love of adventure has meant that I shall not be able to meet my charge.

I was told to talk with the Guild of Monster Hunters, to assess their spirits, to see if they had the fire in their bellies that they should and if they did to gift them with the key.

But I am recovering from a traumatic wound taken in an adventure of my own and my father fusses over me like a duck and refuses permission. An Adventure to Anvil sought through deceiving his will would be none at all!

So I have placed the key in the hands of a trusted Navarri postrunner and insisted that it is delivered to The Shattered Tower. Their name is Quinn and they are both Bard and runner and I have faith in their abilities

With two archmages of Summer in succession I know that I can trust you to follow the call and settle whether the Monster Hunters have the spirit that the Regent of the Eternal Sea speaks of, even if the realm of the Fort on the edge of the Forest is more properly that of the Iron Duke...

May your adventures this solstice be truly special

Marietta di Isola di Erigo, Mage of Summer, Friend to the Heralds of the Regent of the Eternal Sea
