
You have heard rumours over the last few days of strange figures asking odd questions. They are three mages, dressed in the style of Imperial Citizens, but unfamiliar with the ways of The Empire. They have been asking for directions to Anvil and seem to be trying to coordinate to arrive at the summit after it is underway. One person says they heard them planning to be there on Friday night, whilst another swears that they heard Saturday evening.

You have heard rumours over the last few days of strange figures asking odd questions. They are three mages, dressed in the style of Imperial Citizens, but unfamiliar with the ways of The Empire. They have been asking for directions to Anvil and for any information about “Abel of Zenith Ascendant”, “The Bursar of the Conclave” or “The Admiral of the Great Fleet” variously. It is not clear from the rumours you have heard whether these are different people or just different names for the same person.

You have heard rumours over the last few days of strange figures asking odd questions. They are three mages, dressed in the style of Imperial Citizens, but unfamiliar with the ways of The Empire. An innkeeper who had hosted the trio for a night tells of seeing a strange metal mask in one of their packs, wrapped in a tattered cloth.
